TRAC Zooms Back to Indy: Registration Now Open!

The Racing Attorney Conference (TRAC), an annual motorsports legal conference planned and presented by the Indianapolis Bar Association and the North Carolina Bar Association Sports and Entertainment Law Section, returns to Indianapolis on April 14 and 15, 2015.

Now in its eighth year, TRAC combines education (including CLE credits), development and networking with legal and business leaders in the motorsports industry, including NASCAR and INDYCAR.

This year's conference features all new topics including a history of motorsports in the legal profession and panels addressing defending drivers and other high-profile individuals, diversity, fan issues, non-traditional motorsports such as Formula E and powerboat racing, and many more.

In addition to the educational and interactive experiences, TRAC also presents a tremendous opportunity to network and socialize and meet face-to-face with industry participants with whom you may not have otherwise had direct contact.

For the latest updates on TRAC 2015, please visit racingattorneys.com.

Registration Details

TRAC 2015 will be hosted at the Conrad Indianapolis and will feature two days of educational programming complemented with an optional dinner outing on Tuesday evening. Conference Only rates include all educational programming during TRAC 2015, plus breakfast, lunch and one cocktail reception. An optional Tuesday evening dinner outing is also available for $75 per person.

A room block is available at the Conrad Indianapolis with a reduced rate of $189 available for conference attendees. Don't delay! The room block cut-off date is Mar. 17. Details on booking hotel rooms can be found at racingattorneys.com.

PRESIDENT'S COLUMN

#WILLYOUBETHERE?

As I have worked my way through the chairs of the IndyBar to become the 2015 president, I have had the good fortune to meet other bar leaders at American Bar Association meetings. I have learned time and again that bar leaders around the country view the IndyBar as the "Gold Standard" of metropolitan bar associations. Indeed, IndyBar past presidents, current officers and professional engaged and attend our many lunches, seminars and networking events. Our events are outstanding not only for the content and the venues, but also because of the people who attend. The more people we have, the better they are. You are the person we want at our events. If every one of you who reads this article recruits one member this year and brings a colleague to every event, our already strong organization would be beyond phenomenal.

Law firm leaders: we need you this year. We need you to urge your firm members to get involved; we need you to buy tables for our lunches; we need you to sponsor events. We will see to it that your firms find value in your participation.

I fervently hope that 2015 will be a year of engagement for the IndyBar. You will see the hashtag #WILLYOUBETHERE? in many of our event invitations and announcements. You will see it in particular as we promote and invite you to the Bench Bar Conference to be held June 18-20 this year in Louisville, Kentucky. If I have not already seen you and invited you in person, consider yourself invited. This article is your "save the date" reminder. Please put it on your calendar now. I will personally guarantee that you will have a great time.

I look forward to being the IndyBar president this year. Please don't hesitate to call me if we can do anything for you or you have a question or concern. If you are on Twitter, I hope you follow me @Indybarpres. I will follow you back.

While I may seem excited for 2015, my excitement is no more than a reflection of the excitement of our Board, our committee and section chairs, and our fabulous staff. We want you to share in the excitement.

One last question...
